Small Campus Community Controls Affairs With Sanction of College and City Officials

By James Crafton
Vets' Village, the little campus community with 134 residents, boasts a mayor and constable, 3 councilmen, 1 postman, and traffic laws protected by the Maryville Police Department.

Race track antics through narrow streets with parked cars almost bumper to bumper on both sides have, in the past, made Vets' Village an area of potential open season on its 47 children, besides creating a major parking problem for the residents.

But last fall, organized by Mr. Carl Carmichael, a graduate assistant in the social science department, nearly all the villagers turned out to elect a council. With the official sanction of President J. W. Jones, this council has helped remedy the situation.

Village Has Signs

Under the leadership of their elected officers, the village people erected the 10 m. p. h. speed limit and one-way signs, as well as the "Residents Only" warning at the road's entrance to the village.

Enforcement of the law by the Maryville Police was finally begun after some bickering over the status of the little town in respect to the Maryville city limits, Village Mayor James Kaye relates.

Village Officials

Mr. Kaye is a constable as well as Mayor, and is employed on the campus as an electrician. The other village officials are council-

We hear that the freshmen are going to put on an all-freshmen play later on in this semester. The play is Anatole France's "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife." Upon hearing the title of the play, one student remarked, "Hum, must be the history of humanity."

Two freshman students who had a tendency to become homesick while attending this fair college thought of a great idea. They thought that if they adorned their room with things from their home that they would not become homesick.

Sheldon Flobb was a student from Minnesota and also an ice skating addict. So he brought with him 44 barrels over which he had jumped the previous winter to win the Minnesota Jumping-Over-Barrels championship. His roommate, Finnley Pickadaisy, was a history major from Massachusetts; so he brought Plymouth Rock.

Well sir, there was simply not enough room in the Quads for 44 barrels and Plymouth Rock, too. Sheldon and Finnley fell into a violent quarrel so that the entire Quads were kept awake for twelve days and twelve nights. Finally the Dean of Men was called in to settle the situation. He listened carefully to both sides and then took Sheldon and Finnley, pierced their ears, and sold them to the gypsies.

Did you hear about John Snorkelturp who dived from a 300 foot tower into a tub containing only three feet of water? He wasn't hurt a bit, but unfortunately he could not swim and he drowned in the tub.

Most N. W. M. S. C. students are happy over the new additions to the juke box in the den. Now playing are such famous records as a hit of Yule Brenner entitled, "When Your Hair Turns to Skin."

There is also a hit by the Crickets. It has no music; they just rub their legs together.

Fenwick Babbitt states, "I can remember back a long time. For instance I can remember when people used to take a boiled egg out of the water with a spoon instead of a band-aid."

From Dust We Came . . .

Today is Ash Wednesday, the beginning of the period of Lent, leading up to Easter.

Just why ashes first came to be used as a symbol of repentance, no one seems to know. It is known that they were used long before the Christian era.

Ashes and sackcloth were worn to express sorrow and penance in Old Testament times. As a church ceremony, ashes were originally used by those performing public penance.

In 1191, Pope Celestin III sanctioned the ceremonial use of ashes by the entire congregation. In the Roman Catholic Ash Wednesday ceremony, the priest places ashes made from burning the palms used on the previous Palm Sunday on the forehead of those present, with the words "Memento, homo, quia pulvis es, et in pulverem reverteris (Remember, man, that dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return).

Thus, people today begin the annual observance of the beginning of the season of Easter.

College Heights, as the U. S. Post Office knows Vets' Village, has its own mail-man employed by the College. This semester he is Charles Kidd, a resident of the village.

Village Has 44 Families

James Kaye is an electrician on the campus; Raymond Lorange, a herdsman at the dairy; and Arnold Anderson, a caretaker for the village buildings.

Other Improvements May Come For the future, there are hopes of improving trash and garbage facilities, and a general clean-up and beautification of the area, according to Mr. Carmichael.

Although the village council has the blessings of President Jones, it can remain inactive at present, because, in Mayor Kaye's words, "things are going well" at Vets' Village.

'Tis a Tale Told . . .

February 22 is the birthday of the "Father of his Country."

George Washington was a man that many boys have tried to imitate throughout the years, and few men have stood out as such a guiding beacon.

Boys have a tendency to adore anyone who is a success in sports as well as in other activities, and George Washington was one who could be admired both from the intellectual view and the athletic view. His athletic ability was shown in the story about his throwing a coin across the Potomac—a feat that no one has been able to match. Of course one must realize that a dollar does not go so far today as it did in those days. Also, as the captain of a rowing team, Washington has been seen many times crossing the Delaware.

If one goes back through the ages he can find others who have stood as guiding lights in government and in sports.

One such person was Julius Caesar, who not only was a great statesman and a great ruler, but also an observer of the first football game ever to be played. Yes, Julius, along with thousands of other Romans, crowded in the coliseum to see the Christians play the Lions.

Samuel "Slippery" Adams was a man great both in politics and sports. "Slippery" made a big contribution to modern day football as he led a group of patriots onto an English tea vessel docked in the Boston harbor. He organized a group and started dumping tea over the side of the ship—the first "T" formation!

President Eisenhower, a successful general, was voted Golfer of the Year in 1956.

Yes, as February 22 comes up, one is reminded again of men who have contributed much both toward government and toward athletics.—Reith.

Prior to the game it was announced that the Gorillas' previous win over the Bearcats here had been changed. The Gorillas used two ineligible players and thus a 2-0 forfeit victory was marked up for the Bearcats.

Amateur Trampolinists Strive For Perfection in Difficult Art

By J. Gwynn Howard
Spectators of the Maryville-Southwest Missouri State basketball clash on February 8 were given a sparkling halftime exhibition by two enterprising gymnasts. This first look at a trampoline routine was made possible by Gene Johnson and Jamie Tankersley.

Individual interest in this "winter fancy" spurred Gene and Jamie to build up their routine solely by reading "our own books on the subject." Dr. H. D. Petersin and Coach Robert Gregory gave the young men the needed supervision and encouragement to supplement their book knowledge of the trampoline.

Known as the "diving board" of the gymnasts, the trampoline requires the aspirants to include the most difficult twists and flips known to a diver. Here the troubles only begin, as merely maintaining balance is a problem. An acrobatic series is considered a failure if the participant shows any visible sign of strain, or if the landings are the least bit rough. Thus, one can imagine the strength and coordination it takes to give a five minute routine in intercollegiate competition.

Learned the Hard Way

Gene and Jamie learned this artful sport the hard way, to say the least, as they preferred to master the trampoline on their own time, getting a Bearcat's share of the bad springs in the process. Jamie Tankersley was quick to say, "The hardest stunt for me is the ball pullover to front drop." And it is no wonder as the gymnast is not allowed to arch the back in the pullover.

No one part of the body touch the mat before any in completing a front drop. The neither of the "extra-curricular" trampolinists cares to enter intercollegiate competition, have done a commendable job of mastering several of the "point getters."

East Rates High

Though the East leaves a thing to be desired in the realm of football, it is the focal point of gymnastic activity. The Nittany Lions, of Penn State, and Black Knights, of West Point, the perennial contenders for national team championship in gymnastics.

During the last 10 years "Kaydets" have suffered defeats in regular team competition. The last defeat came to Pointers in the 1957 season, the Nittany Lions scored a point triumph. Iowa, Michigan, Stanford, and Southern California are best bets to give the Easters a good go for national honors.

Bowling Teams, Report To Gymnasium Office

Bowling team lists are to be turned in at the office at the gymnasium by Friday, February 22. Bowling will begin Tuesday, February 25, at 4:15 at the Nodaway Lanes.
